

FROM DIANA'S DIARY

Miss Dillpickles Builds a House After Her Own Design.

"What Style of Architecture Is That—Coptic or Igorrote?"

By Fred Schaefer.

V.

Just at present a look into our home at the family around the evening lamp reminds you of a called meeting of bank directors just before the bank is going to fail.

We are trying to figure out whether we can pay for our new house without mortgaging the furniture in our old. The new place is nearly ready and we have already been congratulated in the local paper on our "palatial dwelling on Chow Chow street, which will be soon ready for occupancy by the owner, Mr. Briney Dillpickles, the well-known iron molder, and his interesting and popular family." Outwardly we may be cheerful and the envy of all, but in our bosoms we know it is going to be half rations until we make up for the "extras" on the house. The
